WHAT'S

A WALK THROUGH THE GLEN

Ever walked through the Glen with someone who is really close to you? Wander through and talk about nothing and everything, check out the squirrels on an absolutely perfect day with us.

STUDENT LIFE 16

Getting through the day, dealing with the mail center mob, suffering through the dining halls, ordering from Vinnie's, loving the Rok and those small, intimate (???) gatherings at South . . . . the quintesential Hamilton experience.

FACULTY 32

You may love 'em, you may hate 'em, but the faculty is an integral part of everyone's life. What would we do without professors to assign papers and exams, the Physical Plant to fix the windows stray snowballs break, and deans to organize everything from A to Z?

INSIDE

ORGANIZATIONS 50

Publications, performing groups, private societies—they each say something about Hamilton as a whole and the student as an individual. For some, an organization is simply a creative outlet; for others, a major time commitment, but always an important part of their lives.

SPORTS 72

You name it, some one at Hamilton plays it . From varsity sports like football and squash to clubs like ultimate frisbee and rugby, there's something for everybody. And for those of you who don't feel inclined to exert yourselves, fans are welcome and loved—the more, the better.

SENIORS 98

After four years at good ole 'Ham Tech', the class of 1988 steps out into the real world. Can they handle it—or should we ask if it can handle them?

A WALK THROUGH THE GLEN

"Hi! Haven't seen you in a while. What's up?"

"Nothing much."

"Want to go for a walk in the Glen?"

"Yeah, sounds good. It's not raining for once."

"Y'know, this place always relaxes me."

"Sure. Vegetaion is always relaxing."

"Shut up, bone head, and walk, will you?"

"No, I agree. It's a place where you can escape the typical Hamilton scene, and remember that there's another world out there."

"Hmmm, yeah. Hey, check out that bug!"

"Incredible. Wouldn't want that in my room."

"It was in my room. Be mellow for a while and walk."

"You know, I can't believe we've been here for four years."

"I can't believe I've put up with you for so long. Do you think we're ready for the real world?"

"Hell, no. At least I'm not. Do you think I could get my parents to finance my life for another four years?

"I doubt it. Watch out for the puddle."

"Thanks. Remember when we camped in here for a weekend?"

"Yeah. Big, brave us and the ferocious, maneating squirrels."

"They did eat all the Twinkies."

"Let's sit and rest for awhile."
"Okay."
"Doesn't it seems like we've known each other forever?"
"Mmmm. You hated me when you first met me."
"I thought you were the snobbiest, most stuck-up person I'd ever met. But you turned out okay."
"Hey, I even learned to like the Dead. I couldn't believe that they made us roommates. I guess they knew what they were doing, though."
"Once we got past the stereotypes, we were okay."
"You're still a slob."

"Remember when you wanted to transfer?"

"Sort of . . ."

"I'm glad you didn't."

"The funny thing is, it doesn't even seem like that was me. I can't even remember why I wanted to."

"Oh, yeah, it was you, swearing that you hated everyone and everything that had anything to do with this place. It's kind of funny now."

"I guess everyone goes through it. You didn't want to come back from Europe."

"I was in love with a beautiful, wonderful Italian."

"Gimme a break."

"I can't wait for the spring. The gardens will be in bloom and it'll be beautiful in here then."

"Nah. I like the fall the best, with leaves crunching and—"

"And the damn squirrels hiding nuts?"

"Better than our Twinkies. Of course, a snowball fight in here can't be beat. Remember the one the five of us had freshman year?"

"Ah, youth!"

"Will you shut up?"

"You're getting all sappy and nolstalgic, and we're not even out of here yet."

"Sorry. I'm just going to miss this place. Aren't you, just a little?"

"Yeah, well, maybe. Just a little."

"You know what I was thinking about?"

"Besides life, the universe, and where the next party is?"

"We're sort of the end of a dynasty."

"Huh?"

"We're the last class to have four J-terms, four years of Caravano, and to been here when the drinking age was 19."

"The good old days of no party forms, beer trucks on the quad, and the Pub, not the hub."

"I wonder what it'll be like without Caravano and Jervis."

"Probably the same. Denouncing the frats one minute and squashing all protests the next. I think they would like it better if we were all mindless automatons."

"Nay. Then they'd say we were apathetic."

"We can't win, can we?"

"Wonder what it'll be like when some of us are trustees."

"Everyone will have mellowed with age and the students will think we're backwards and old-fashioned.

"It's been great talking to you."

"You should come by sometime for dinner. My suitemate makes really great lasagne."

"The glory of a suite!"

"Hey, you could've had one."

"The private bathrooms and fireplaces of Carnegie won out over the kitchens of Babbit."

"I'm sure the proximity of the library influnced you, too."

"Yeah, Right."

"Well, I'll see you around, okay?"

"Sure thing."

STUDENT LIFE

A DAY IN THE LIFE

"Got up, got out of bed, dragged a comb across my head . . . " The Beatles must have known about the typical Hamilton morning ritual. That alarm clock goes off, always to early, it seems, and you drag your body out of bed (or maybe you don't) to face another day of classes. Through the rain, wind, and snow we trudge (once and awhile blessed with sun) and try to stay awake as our professors try to enlighten us on the chemical make-up of aspirin.

Ocassionally, those days turn into all-nighters . . . the horror of a 20 page paper due at eleven the next morning is something most of us have suffered through. After it's done, it's sleep, blessed sleep, and then onto another day on the Hill.

"Waking up is hard to do . . . "

What am I going to wear?

Time for the old shower

Off to class!!!

LATE AGAIN!

WHEN IS THIS CLASS GOING TO END?!!

WELL, ONLY 16 PAGES TO GO...

AND, FINALLY, Back to Bed....

DINING HALLS

For the students of Hamilton College, the dining halls offer a chance to escape the daily routine. Whether meeting at McEwen for lunch, or gathering at Commons for dinner, the dining halls provide a place to get together with friends and catch-up on the latest news. Lunch is most often gulped down before the next class, but dinner is a bit more slow-paced. Breakfast is the least often attended meal for obvious reasons, but steady early risers know that food is much more accessible than at lunch, when the lines are impossible. Although the food is not always satisfying, and is sometimes mysterious (tofu kabobs?), there is always the salad bar and a great selection of cereal. After all, it's the company and social atmosphere that makes dining at McEwen, Commons, or Bundy so important to life at Hamilton College. Why else would the administration consider it as a punishment, and force Chi-Psi onto the meal plan as a part of their probation?

What will I have today?

Oh, my God, what is that?!

So, Dave, is the food in Bundy better?

PARTIES

Whether it be the Winter Carnival, House Party Weekend, Halloween, Christmas, or just Friday night, Hamilton College students can always find a reason to celebrate. Things have changed since the class of '88 were first year students. There are no longer beer trucks or the Pub, but a 21-year-old drinking age and party forms haven't stopped us from managing to have a great time. After a winter of being jammed 300 to a room at a typical party in Carnegie, spring offers the comfort of couches and lounge chairs in the quads. Hamilton students from Kirkland to Stryker to Bundy shed their woolen layers to take advantage of balmy 50 degree temperatures and party outside. Even the sight and smell of the bathrooms on Sunday morning doesn't deter Hamilton students from partying again the next weekend or even the next day!

THE LIBRARY

If it weren't for the shelves of books and stacks of magazines, the library might be mistaken for the new student center of Hamilton College. The second floor is a great place for 'studying' and 'learning' - that is 'studying' the traffic through the front door and 'learning' the latest gossip from friends. The heat in the library seems to be a great cure for insomnia if the piles of reading don't get you first. The all-night reading room is usually filled with people trying to finish that paper, cramming for tomorrow's midterm, or just grabbing a smoke. Sometimes even Rod shows up to deliver a late-night snack! Thank goodness the library course was required, how else would everyone know what is really on the third floor?

Kristen and Doug, get to work!

Can't you see that I'm studying?

OFF-CAMPUS

As much as we all love the "Hill", everyone needs to get off of it at times and rejoin the real world—or at least as close as it gets. Escaping Hallmark food for a night at China Gardens, the Red Lion, Carmella's, Pizza Hut, or even Burger King is a treat, and getting into the Rok, the VT, or Dowling's is virtually a Ham Tech rite of passage. Then, of course, there is the weekly trip to Great American or Price Chopper to restock the suite's fridge. (Don't forget the Bulk Food section.) Or maybe you need a needle for your stereo. Just drive down to Sangertown Mall—and Margarita's is a great place to stop for a cool frosty one.

We all need money for these little jaunts . . . so it's down to the Homestead or Hayes, and then away we go . . off campus!

THE MAIL CENTER

"Hey, I got a package!" That little pink notice in your box brings joy to your heart, and inspires envy in others! The mail center is always a bustling confusion of people between classes, where we fight our way to our boxes, yelling rushed "Hey, how are you"'s to people we don't see often enough. Some of our greatest moments of anticipation come when we turn the combination of our mailboxes to see if the check from Mom and Dad or the latest issue of Rolling Stone has come yet, and there is no disappointment like that when the box is empty. Oh, and don't throw the campus mail on the ground. That's what the garbage cans are for!

LUNCH AT THE HUB

Large Coke, please.

Lunch at Bristol isn't just a convenience. It's an institution. Every Monday through Friday, from one to two in the afternoon, the devotees of "All My Children" and the fans of tuna melts and chicken fillets stand on line, Validine cards in hand, to get lunch and sit back and relax with their friends while watching the trials and travails of their favorite soap stars. Don't think that it's all women—there are plenty of men who care more about what happens to Erica Kane than any woman on this campus does. And if you go often enough, Veronica will have memorized your favorite sandwich!

You've been on line how long?

A YEAR IN REVIEW

"Hi, its you again."

"You never came by for that lasagne."

"Yeah, I know. This year's been crazy, with my thesis and all."

"I know. I just had to defend mine yesterday."

"Did you see the McGovern-Galbraith debate?"

"Yeah. Galbraith had some really good points about Reaganomics."

"Bull! The man shyed away from every one of McGovern's points, and couldn't even deal with the open question session."

"Well, at least they showed up, unlike Joe Biden."

"Yeah. I wonder whose speech he would have read."

"I was so psyched that both Max Creek and Jimmy Cliff came."

"Forget them! Did you see Dizzy Gillespie?"

"God, yes. He was so incredible!"

"Y'know, some idiot asked me if he was related to Kevin Gillespie before the show."

"There are some really dumb people in this world."

"No, they just lack your complete cosmopolitan knowledge."

"Will you shut up?"

"That Green-Innis debate sure fired up a lot of debate on campus."

"Well, it seems to me that people who don't know a thing about the BLSU shouldn't criticize it."

"I don't just mean that argument. The subject that they spoke on sure inflamed enough people before that guy wrote his letter to the Spectator."

"Actually, I never went. I had a paper due that night."

"Feeb."

"I did go to the Ralph Nader thing. I even got to talk to him afterwards at the receptiom at Bristol."

"Well, aren't you special?"

"Well, the Shambach Center is finally done."

"Thank God. It was such a hassel with all that that construction."

"It's ugly as hell. It looks like a prison."

"It'll be great for concerts, though. The school really needed it."

"I was really pissed that they weren't going to include anything for theater there."

"That's life, tootsie."

"You know what I'm going to donate money for when I'm a rich, important alum?"

"What?"

"Parking lots."

"Y'know what I can't believe?"

"Besides that this year is finally over?"

"That all the protests this year were basically ignored. Nobody paid attention to the crosses that were put up by CARA."

"People definately paid attention to the indepentdent alternative encampment Al Ham Day."

"You just have your nose out of joint because you date a frat boy."

"No, I just don't think that was the way to bring attention toi the problems involved."

"So you do agree that there are problems?"

"I'm not blind, am I?"

"I'm glad that you talked me into going to Women's Energy Weekend. I loved Audre Lourde."

"Wasn't that incredible? I was so moved by her poetry. And her speaking voice . . . "

"Yeah, I know. I totally started to reevaluate what it means to be a woman in this society. Especially after Sonia Johnson."

"She's so mind boggling. I read her book in Women's Ethical Vision this J-term. She's got such a total outlook."

"Don't you think she goes a little far, though?"

"But you have to go far—like, stretch yourself, you know?"

"The thing is, the people who really need to go to those talks never do. It's just the people who already think that way."

"Well, It's finally spring . . just what you were waiting for."
"And Springfest!"
"We kind of got boned. It was too short."
"I got such a sunburn."
"I got thrown in a wading pool."
"Thrown in or did you fall in?"
"Shut up."
"Hey, at least you remember."
"I love Tiny Lights."
"The reggae bands were okay, too."
"Two more days 'til graduation."
"I'm not ready."

Rub Board.

HI. WELL, IT'S HERE. THE 1988 YEARBOOK. IF YOU DON'T LIKE IT, THAT'S YOUR PROBLEM. WE WENT THROUGH ENOUGH GRIEF. APOLOGIES TO SENIORS WHO SENT THEIR PICTURES IN LATE AND DIDN'T GET IN, AND TO THOSE SPORTS AND ORGANIZATIONS WHO ARE MISSING DUE TO PHOTOGRAPHIC SCREWUP. I DON'T CARE; MY PADDED CELL IS WAITING.

Don't Blame Them!!

MUCH THANKS TO: TDX THURSDAY NITES, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., My mother + father for developing film, Federal Express, Ritz One Hour Photo, Steve Charzuk for Sports pictures, and the Spectator Staff (especially Ted + Beth) for putting up with our anxiety attacks, and Hitz Shapiro of C+I) for coming through in a clinch!

A $900 typewriter and no pencil sharpener. Typical.
